

Movie Reviews by Sarah Davis

Saving Private Ryan

A deep look at the problems of war, this timeless film resonates still today.

Caddyshack

Bill Murray and Chevy Chase, a winning duo, play the HELL out of some golf. Wow!

The Godfather

Grudges, fear, and manipulation are all major themes of what I would describe as the most widely recognized American film.

Lord of the Rings

This movie takes place in a fantasy world where the population is 99% male, but it's ok because they get to wear jewelry.

Jurassic Park

I might have seen this one but honestly I always confuse it with Jumanji but blah blah blah Jeff Goldblum.

The Butterfly Effect

This psychological thriller examines how small moments affect greater outcomes on our daily lives.

Sliding Doors

This psychological thriller examines how small moments affect greater outcomes on our daily lives.

Groundhog Day

This psychological thriller examines how small moments affect greater outcomes on our daily lives.

Schindler's List: an in-depth review

Even though I couldn't name a single actor in this movie without Googling it, even though the only thing I know about this movie is that it's at least tangentially related to the Holocaust, even though I have no idea what timeframe this movie was released (80s? 90s?), I can promise you that this is one of the greatest movies of all time. I kind of remember that there is probably a scene that takes place in the rain, and the timeless symbolism imbued in this scene probably instills great hope in the view for rebirth and/or redemption.
